Formal Education:

Doctor of Philosophy: The Ohio State University Concentration: Sport Management Cognate: History	Columbus, OH Spring 2005
Master of Education: University of Louisville Concentration: Sport Administration	Louisville, KY Spring 2001
Bachelor of Science: The Pennsylvania State University Concentration: Exercise and Sport Science	University Park, PA Fall 1998

Research/Scholarship Interests:

My research interests embrace the use of historical methods to review the management history associated with organizations, individuals, and sport facilities to help highlight the contribution of history within contemporary management settings. Also acting as an advocate for the 'historic turn' (i.e., that history can help revise and/or create theory), my work involving facilities primarily uses theories related to innovation and modernization to better understand the construction and preservation history of sport venues as a commercial attraction (as led, managed, and influenced by various stakeholder groups). With a special emphasis on the intercollegiate and professional sport contexts in the United States, my work also features reviews that look the management of postseason mega events. Finally, I am interested in understanding various issues of management education related to sport management.

Success in the Classroom: Teaching Tips from Experience (Spring Quarter 2009)

- This workshop sought to have faculty share their ideas on teaching and the success and failures of specific strategies/tactics.

Teaching in a Time of Institutional Transition (Fall Quarter 2008)

- This workshop focuses on the forces faculty face at the institutional, school, and college level that will affect our teaching. The goal of this workshop is to consider how we can find creative and scholarly ways to make the necessary changes to our teaching in ways that benefit our students and programs. Table discussions will focus on big institutional changes that will directly affect teaching (e.g., large classes, combined sections, shared courses) and give participants an opportunity to share ideas and creative solutions to these institutional imperatives.

Enhancing Critical Thinking among our Students (Fall Quarter 2007)

- This workshop discussed what critical thinking means, discover why it is important to develop classroom strategies to enhance critical thinking, and learn ways that such strategies have been implemented in other programs.

Preparing Doctoral Students for Life in Academia (Spring Quarter 2007)

- This workshop sought to discuss the following questions: How do we prepare students for university jobs? What sorts of courses should these students take? What strategies can we share with students to improve their likelihood of success? What non-class requirements (if any) should we have for these students? How did you prepare for the process, and is there anything that we can learn from your experiences to pass along?

Setting Meaningful Instructional Goals (Fall Quarter 2006)

- This discussion will help each of us consider the broad range of options that are available to enhance our teaching and encourage us to identify meaningful goals for instructional improvement.

Methods to Assess (Spring Quarter 2006)

- This workshop is intended to generate some lively discussions about assessment methods we have used, both formal and informal, to try to both assess—and enhance— student learning. We asked... What are we trying to assess when we assess student learning? What are reasonable assessment goals? How do we know when our assessments are working?

Making Time, Making Change (Fall Quarter 2005)

- Allows faculty to discuss solutions to feeling overwhelmed, in manageable and concrete steps. We're not trying to change the world here, just discuss small steps we each can take to help get control over our professional lives. Each table will be hosted by a faculty member to help lead the discussion (any volunteers?), and participants will have an opportunity to move from table to table. The goal is for each of us to walk away with 3 or 4 concrete steps we can implement right away.
